

How do I finish my essay?

Very often students are faced with a task such as writing an essay. Usually, the main text is written quickly, because the genre involves a small amount of volume, and the main questions arise in the conclusion. In some cases it can be very difficult, and the author is faced with the question: «Where can I pay someone to write my essay cheap?»

But if you write it yourself, here are a few tips. In this article we will try to explain why it is so important to complete an essay competently and how to do it correctly.

An essay usually has no strict design standards and is a free expression of thoughts. But, as a rule, there are some points that should be kept in mind when building a composition of this genre:

- First, there is an introduction;
- Then (in the main part) the author's thoughts are presented in the form of short theses and supported by arguments;

Finally, a conclusion is written, which we will talk about.

To sum up correctly is very important when writing any work, including an essay. First, it visually and logically makes the work complete, understandable to the reader: the narrative is not interrupted, but gradually goes towards its completion. Secondly, it demonstrates the literacy and labor costs of the author of the essay, he really has done the work, understood the topic, studied certain materials, expressed his thoughts and in the end was able to draw conclusions.

So, what to pay attention to in the final part of the essay? At first, you can repeat the main topic of the work, highlighting the main points that needed to be studied. You can also briefly write out the main ideas on which you once again want to focus the reader's attention. The theses mentioned earlier should be reformulated so as not to cause repetition. Conclusions on those aspects that have already been mentioned in the introduction or the main part can also be presented in a slightly different form, or you can use special phrases when presenting them. For example, "summarizing, I would like to note", "the analysis has shown the following", "the result can be the following conclusions", "the arguments presented earlier suggest that", "this confirms our idea of what", etc.

It is important to understand that the conclusion can not contain new information, facts, which were not mentioned earlier, because it can overload or confuse the reader. Conclusions are made only on the basis of what has already been covered before.

It is possible to finish the essay with a beautiful phrase that will make the reader think about the problem or call for some actions. One can remember a suitable quote from a famous person, a proverb or phraseology, but here the main thing is not to overdo it and it is really worth inserting a phrase.

In this article we have tried to tell you why you need a conclusion in an essay and how to write it correctly. Using the proposed recommendations, you can quickly and easily write a conclusion to an essay on any topic!